DUBROVNIK ACCOMMODATION

Accommodation in Dubrovnik runs the gamut from backpackers and hostels to decadent sleeps in five star luxury hotels.

Whether you're looking for budget digs or have an expense card burning a hole in your pocket, there is also a wide selection (in both price and quality) of private rooms in family homes (called 'sobes') to well appointed holiday apartments and villas for rent in Dubrovnik.

We hope you enjoy this fresh* mini-guide to some of the best places to stay in Dubrovnik.

Locally updated and revised, fresh* mini-guides are a great way to keep up to date on all the latest happenings & travel information in Croatia.

SOME QUICK TIPS BEFORE WE START

- During the peak season (June - August), accommodation in and around the old town can become quite scarce. If you are looking to rent an apartment in Dubrovnik, or secure a room booking, it is advisable to reserve in advance. Hostels also have a tendency to get booked fast.
- If you plan to stay longer than a couple nights, prices in private rooms may be up to 30% cheaper. Negotiate your stay upfront.
- A 'ten minute walk' or something 'close' to the old town is often doublespeak for 'way the hell out'. This applies especially to the touts that gather around the bus stops and ferry terminal. Although it can get a bit overwhelming (especially after a long trip), try to be patient as most of these people are just working hard for a living. But be sure to get them to point out their place on a map unless you feel like taking buses into town.

Without further ado, here are some of our favourite places to stay in Dubrovnik.

Fresh* Sheets (old town, Dubrovnik)

The only hostel actually located in Dubrovnik's historical old town, Fresh* Sheets is one of your best choices for budget accommodation inside the walls. Newly renovated in 2009, Fresh* Sheets offers clean comfortable beds in character rooms with ensuite bathrooms. Your stay includes: free continental breakfast, internet access and wi-fi, book exchange, communal kitchen, and a great common area. Fresh* Sheets is just minutes away from a famous cliff-side bar and a jewel of a swimming hole. All shops, bars, and restaurants are also easily accessible.
